ABSTRACT

Child labor is the practice of having children engage in economic activity on a part or full time basis and the practice deprives children of their childhood and is harmful to their physical and mental development also it has been acceptable as a serious and challenging issue in the civilized societies around the globe. Its continued existence remains a source of concern for all segments of human society. Different socio-economic factors can be held responsible for the prevailing poverty, illiteracy, unemployment, lack of family planning, dissatisfaction about education system, absence of social security mechanism and many others. Now it is the responsibility of the government to provide children with their rights and to protect them from all sorts of exploitation, because the future of mankind and civilization lies in children.

2. Poverty
3. Ignorance of parents and deprivation.
4. Child labour as a mean of survival.

CONCLUSION

Effective & comprehensive implementation of Labour. Both the executive and the judiciary are chiefly responsible for the proper implementation of the law and for providing equality in status opportunity, dignity, and freedom not only to children but also to adults. Therefore the state has made laws for the child labour, minimum labour standard and law against antihuman practices like atrocities on dalites. The trial for offences committed by the employer should be conducted speedily. For this local management committee consisting of legal officer, local governmental authorities and representative from NGOs should be formed to handle minor offences involve minor penalty, grave offences containing imprisonment and higher penalties should be reserved for the courts. The severity of penalties should be increased so that it will discourage employer. More importantly punishment like withdrawing of licenses should be included, if the employer.
