

The burden of being a Teacher and their roles in motivating passive students.

Rasulova Matluba Hamzayevna

Kokand State Pedagogical Institute,

Kokand

" Without knowing the force of words, it is impossible to know teachers"

Confucius, Analects

People learn through their entire lives. They constantly improve their knowledge and develop. Every person should have the chance to get a higher degree, gain new knowledge and experience in today's globalized world. I think that a college or university education should be available to all students because every person has the right to choose the way to self-perfection. For improving all the opinions, there is a primary and demanding occupation stands, no one can be surprised if we say it is teachers-occupation. The government is striving to enhance their roles, and challenging them to be effective in education so, many attempts such as increasing their salaries, supplying teachers with necessary materials are being carried on.

The quality of education started increasing dramatically. Students will be getting more interesting and professional lectures. Also, they will constantly attend classes in order to listen to an amazing lecture and make an evaluation of the current teacher. In addition to those practical benefits, a school will be better funded by it is sponsors and appreciated in the community. This, in its turn, will attract more students because it will be an honor to study in such a school.

Teachers who get high grades from their students deserve to be rewarded financially or otherwise. Otherwise, teachers who get low grades must be sanctioned. This will force teachers to constantly improve their knowledge to get higher salary and simultaneously will improve the learning process. Students will have the opportunity to have the best teachers and get more interesting and comprehensive lectures.

First of all, all people are different and they have different abilities to learn and understand the given subjects. Some students have to spend many hours studying a subject. At the same time, other students need half an hour to deeply understand the given lecture. Second of all, we all have different goals in attending schools. Some students want to gain more knowledge and experience that will help them in the future to succeed and make a great career. Others are forced to go to a school by their parents, so, basically, they do not care about their grades and studying.

It has been apparent for everyone that many teachers confront a great deal of challenges while working with students who are passive when it comes to compare with the other active students in classes. This certainly makes the teachers worry about student's future prosperities. So, in this situation what kind of methods and necessary ways can be put into practice? We can not only blame the teachers for lack of knowledge but the students too. Some of the students may have come from different characters that may be difficult for them to join the class with immediately.

There are many reasons why the students get into passive learners. Some teachers often claim that they cannot find alternative ways to change the passive learners into active ones, in addition, it seems hard to them to control the whole team at the same time. This can lead to disengagement and student acceptance that they cannot exert control over their learning process. Furthermore, it can be hard to know how to motivate passive students without insight into their experiences.

The idea about evaluation teachers by their students is very good. This kind of evaluation can bring many benefits to teachers, students as well as to school. Teachers have the opportunity to find out from this kind of test how good and clearly their students understand the lectures. It will help them to improve and perfect their knowledge and experience. Also, teachers who get high grades must be rewarded financially or otherwise. On the other hand, the teachers who receive low grades must be sanctioned, for example by lowering their salary. So, this can help to uplift the level of professionalism among the teachers.

Second of all, students will more often attend lectures because they will be asked to evaluate their teachers. Students will have the opportunity to choose the best teachers because if a teacher gets a low grade he or she may be fired and replaced with the better one.

Teachers can provide journaling activities, as well as talk with them in a group to provide practice in these soft skills. Teachers and parents can come together to light that fire that makes learning exciting and meaningful for the student. When students are at the helm of their own learning, they feel a greater sense of accomplishment over small milestones and are more willing to exert time and energy toward more challenging goals and understand more about how to help students switch tracks and become more engaged learners.

we can infer that the teachers are required to work with passive students closely and observe them if it is needed. Educators who can enable students to open up to talk about various issues and challenges can then identify social-emotional or learning needs. This can help inform educators about the best approach as challenges in areas outside of the classroom can often interfere with the learning process.

Used literature

1.504 Absolutely Essential words (third edition) by Murray Bromberg, Julies Liebb

2.Crooks,T.J (2002) The Impact of classroom evaluation practice on students' Review of Educational Research